for notices over four lines Epitome of the National Exhibition. Agricultural Hall is a large glass building with a gothic rook. The structure is complete, although much of the material for exhibition is yet unopened. The work of arranging, however, is progressing. There is a vast collection of farming implements, steam machinery for every kind of farm work, machines for cutting down forest trees and turning prarie lands upside down; draining and ditching machines. plows, harrows, grubbing hoes, and an immense machine for stacking hay. One section coutains specimens of every beast, reptile, bird and its et known to the continent of America. A large exhibit of breadstuffs-bread in its various stages of production, from flour to the baked loaf, steam-cooked food for cattle, crushed grain and meals of all varieties. The finest collection of teas, coffees, spices, sugars and other groceries. The elastic gums of Africa, great heapes of india-rubber and gutta percha, bird cages, fishing nets and pig-iron. Skeletons of extinct animals, enormous saurians, mastodons, shell fish and turtles. Louisiana displays a tree treautifully draped with Spanish moss, a fungous growth abounding along the entire gulf coast, along the rivers and in the swamps of the South. It has become an important article for beds and upholstery. California exhibits her grain, cacti and gold quar'z; hams and packed pork from Cincinnati. Veterinary surgery presents all parts of the horse to illustrate diseases and the effects of bad shoeing. Mapilla shows fine hemp, wines, oils, tobacco, leather, and every variety of wood. Liberia has here coffee and cocea, with a fine exhibit of palm soap. Brazil and Portugal have also a collection of wines fruits, grains, etc. There are thirty differen threshing machines, one hundred reapers and mowers, many of them as finely finished as pieces of jewelry. Also, a machine showing a great improvement in the automatic binder, a machine driven over the fields, leaving the grain behind it, tied up in sheaves. There is a fine set of plows from South Bend, Indiana, gold plated, costing $1,000 per plow. Nothing in this line has been overlooked; there are an endless variety of prairie, sod and stubble paring plows, with double mold boards, gang an sulky plows, mole and ditch plows, rollers and cultivators, single and double shovel plows for row crops, potato planters, seed drills, corn planters, potato diggers, etc.; edge tools, axes, grain and grass soythes, sickles, corn and hay knives. We must not fail to mention that Liberia presents a specimen of cloth weven in norrow breadths, and the loom on which it is woven. The loom, shuttle and all. weighs only one and a half pounds. Horticul-tural Hall is a beautiful palace, in the Moorish style of architecture, with an elegant fountain in the center, from which the walks radiate in every direction and divide the intervening space into beds containing rare and beautiful shrubs, il wers and trees from tropical countries. It is called the palm-house. Here are the broad fan palm, the sago, date and cocoa palms, orange and lemon trees. The encalyptus or malaria tree, the camphor tree, the guava, mahogany and india-rubber tree. The collection of palms owned in South Amboy, N. J., is worth $10,000. There are four species of American palms in the palm house. There are trembling acacias and a banana tree, a few cacti, the blossoms of the deepest scarlet; also a Norfolk Island pine. 'One of the trees, a sago paim, once belonging to Robert Morris, is ten feet high, and is said to be one hundred and thirty years old. - New York News. A Conscientious Voter -- "Bout dis hyar
